Roll out the holiday season

By Laurie Carmount,

Curator Agnes Jamieson Gallery & Minden Hills, Cultural Centre

Starting Nov. 21, the fifth annual Festival of Trees will open its doors at the Minden Hills Cultural Centre for three days. The main fundraising event for the Minden Hills Cultural Centre, this festival will offer the most stunning trees yet to be seen. Designed and assembled by talented volunteers and sponsors, these trees, wreaths and garlands will be a delight to behold.

Under the guidance of Pam Smith, the Festival of Trees committee, Jaklin Casper, Eli Welch, Sinclair Russell, Joe Smith and Pat Campbell, have been planning, assembling and will soon display 35 trees – a record number!

This year the festival also involves a kids' craft centre by a small café, offering coffee, tea and goodies. Adjacent to this area will be a fully stocked candy store. When you have enjoyed the Santa Claus parade be sure to visit the festival.

During the festival you can also view the Agnes Jamieson Gallery's annual Members' Show; a non-juried display of work. This includes a wide variety of disciplines and is an interesting opportunity for one to view work. People's Choice Award happens during this show and is a way for you to vote for your favourite - a hard decision! Winner of this award will gain an exclusive showing of their work at the next Members' Show. This year, the past winner, George Farrell, will be exhibiting his photography work called Rust: A Fatal Abstraction.

One can also wander the grounds and visit the heritage buildings and Nature's Place where a number of decorated trees are located. Admission and raffle tickets are the same price as last year. For more information go to www.mindenculturalcentre.com under "Attractions."

A new addition to the Festival of Trees is GLITTER. So named by the co-ordinator, Paul Roy, owner of UpRiver Trading Company in Minden, this event pushes the boundaries as to what fundraising can be. It's different and aims to be a fun evening of cocktails and drinks, fancy hors d'oeuvres, entertainment and auctions. Roy has managed to put together a number of fabulous raffle ticket prizes.

Joining in the festive atmosphere is the Highlands Opera Company who will be performing a number of thematic songs with a splashy pop edge to them. All girls like diamonds, right?

Semi-formal attire with a touch of glitter is recommended for this event – however, if you desire, put on the Ritz!

Tickets are $35 per person, $20 after 9 p.m. For tickets to GLITTER, happening Saturday, Nov. 22, from 6 p.m. to 12 a.m., call 705-286-3763.

All proceeds raised at these fundraiser events add to the Minden Hills Cultural Centre community programming. Located at 176 Bobcaygeon Road, Minden.

Cold weather energy savings

Cold weather means using more energy to heat your home and for customers with baseboard heating, this can have a significant impact on the electricity bill. For example, a five foot baseboard heater can cost up to $150 a month to operate. Most homes have more than one baseboard heater, so multiply $150 by how many baseboard heaters you have and you can see how quickly your monthly electricity bill can rise.

Small improvements to your home can lead to big savings on your winter electricity bill.

Here are 10 tips from Hydro One to help keep your house warm and your electricity bills down:

1. Fill the gaps! Check the trim on windows for gaps between the frame and your house. As much as 13 per cent of your home's heat loss could be escaping through the gaps. If possible, stuff insulation between the window and frame or try caulking around the window.
2. On sunny winter days, trap warm air inside by opening window coverings to let the warmth of the sun in. Once the sun goes down, close window coverings to keep the warmth in. Think of your curtains as insulation for your windows.
3. Another inexpensive option is to build a barrier against cold by sealing your windows with plastic sheeting in the winter. All you need is a hair dryer, double sided tape and some inexpensive plastic sheeting. There is indoor and outdoor sheeting available.
4. If your doors aren't properly fitted, air is leaking outside. Rubber weather stripping is an easy way to seal the door by creating a skirt on the door frame.
5. If you have a fireplace that you never use, consider getting it sealed as warm air is sucked out if the damper is open. If you do enjoy sitting by the fireplace, make sure you turn down your main thermostat. Fires can actually draw heat from the room up the chimney so your furnace has to work even harder.
6. Close off air registers in unused areas or rooms.
7. Move furniture away from air vents. Furniture placed over vents can block the flow of heat.
8. Install a programmable thermostat and try these settings:
   - 21° (70°F) for relaxing
   - 20° (68°F) for working/exercising
   - 18° (64°F) for sleeping or away for the day
   - 16° (61°F) when away on vacation
9. Make sure your furnace is running smoothly by:
   - Checking all of your intake and exhaust air vents to make sure they are clear.
   - Inspecting the filter. Hold it up to a light bulb and if you can't see the bulb, it's time for a new one.
   - Clearing the area around your furnace to ensure it is ventilated with ample circulation of fresh air for combustion.
   - Setting your furnace fan switch on "automatic" instead of "on" or "continuous."
10. If your furnace is more than 18 years old, it may be more cost-effective to replace it with a new energy-efficient one. If you replace it with a high-efficiency model, you could get up to $250 in incentives. Visit the Hydro One website for more details.

Bad reading experience

Erin's Editions

Erin Kernohan-Berning
Branch Services Librarian

Have you ever started reading a book expecting it to be wonderful, and then found that you really didn't like it – maybe even hated it? Did you put the book down and cut your losses, moving on to the next one? Or did you keep reading, seething over how horrible the book was while feeling unable to put it down? How did you feel when – at long last and after many frustrating hours – you finally finished that terrible, horrible book? Did you feel upset? Betrayed even?

At this year's Reader's Advisory in a Day workshop, librarians from all over Ontario were asked to reflect on the "Bad Reading Experience." The bad reading experience often happens when there's a mismatch between a book and the reader's expectations and preferences. You might be wondering: "What's the big deal?" You may be surprised to learn that reading is such a deeply personal activity that a bad reading experience can leave a reader feeling not only disappointed, but actually betrayed by the author and possibly even the person who recommended the offending book to them.

For library workers, the act of helping people to find their next book to read, what we call Reader's Advisory, is serious business. We do our best to recommend books that fit well with a reader's preferences and try to avoid their dislikes or subject matters they are sensitive to. For instance, many are particularly sensitive to certain topics such as war or abuse, so avoid stories around these topics. We try to learn these likes, dislikes, and sensitivities in conversation with you as we discuss your next read. We also do our best to be unbiased when we recommend books – it doesn't matter if we liked or disliked the book, what matters is whether you might like the book we are handing over you.

Like anything, however, things don't always go to plan – the plan being that you are going to walk away with a book that you are going to love. Sometimes, a book just doesn't turn out as expected and you (at best) didn't like it that much, and (at worst) had such a bad reading experience that it put you off of picking up another book. With that said, and this is something that we kept coming back to when talking about the bad reading experience, you have every right to put down the book. Are you reading a book that you don't like? Is reading it making you angry or upset? Put it down. Right now. Yes, I'm talking to you. You don't have to read it. Put it down, and move on to a book that will bring you happiness and enrich your life – which is exactly the point of reading. The great thing about reading is it is all about you, and you get to call the shots.

That said, for some readers there is actually value in the bad reading experience. While I won't name them

The flu shot – it's not just for you

Every year, thousands of Canadians die of influenza and its complications. The flu is very contagious and a critical seasonal health issue, particularly for people with chronic conditions such as asthma.

The Ontario Lung Association says that almost everyone should get the flu shot. "It not only helps to protect you from being infected with the flu virus, it also reduces the risk to people around you – family, friends and people in your community," says Carole Madeley, director of respiratory health programs with the Ontario Lung Association.

"This is called 'community immunity.' It means that the more people who get the flu shot in a community the less risk to others, particularly vulnerable groups such as the elderly, young children, pregnant women and people with chronic conditions such as lung and heart disease."

If you are still not convinced that you should get the flu shot, you have probably heard something that has caused concern. Here are some common myths about the flu shot:

Myth #1: The flu shot is not safe.

The Facts: The flu vaccine is safe for almost everyone six months of age and older. If you are worried, talk to your health-care provider, pharmacist or public health office. The shot contains dead flu virus. If you happen to get the flu soon after getting the shot, you were probably getting sick anyway. It takes a couple of weeks after vaccination for your body to build resistance against the virus.

Myth #2: Only certain people should get the flu shot.

The Facts: Almost everyone should get the flu shot. That includes healthy people, people with chronic illnesses, children older than six months and pregnant women. If you have asthma or chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, the flu shot is a good way to help prevent flare-ups caused by chest infections.

Myth #3. You don't need to get the flu shot every year.

The Facts: The flu virus changes from year to year so you need to get vaccinated with another flu shot every year.

If you have questions about the flu shot or any other lung health issue, call The Lung Association Lung Health Information Line at 1-888-344-LUNG (5864) to speak to a Certified Respiratory Educator. You can also email info@on.lung.ca

You're the boss

here, I have read books that I didn't like – and I mean really didn't like; books where I complained loudly throughout the duration of reading them. In these cases I actually learned from the bad reading experience – I learned what I didn't like, and what to avoid in the future. I have also just put a book down – my record for giving up on a book is five pages in. Reading has the ability to teach us about ourselves, even when we feel like what we're reading is a horrible book.

So, is there really such a thing as a bad reading experience if all reading experiences are valuable? That's for you to decide – when it comes to reading, you're the boss.

Child mental health survey first in 30 years

You've probably heard – one in five Ontario children/youth have a mental health issue.

Is that number still true? We don't know. That number came from the last Ontario Child Health Study, conducted in 1983. Thirty years ago the world was a very different place.

The largest and most comprehensive study on child and youth mental health that has ever been done in Ontario is now underway. The 2014 Ontario Child Health Study (2014 OCHS), conducted by Statistics Canada, will invite over 13,500 families with children and youth aged four to 17 years living in 180 communities to participate. In addition, more than 200 schools from these same communities will be asked to participate in the School Mental Health Surveys, conducted by McMaster University. This companion study will examine the link between schools and student mental health. The information gathered through both studies will provide a more complete overview of our children and youth than ever before.

"More and more children are born into social and economic disadvantage, which increases their risk for poor health and lowers their life chances. It is up to us to find strengths in families, neighbourhoods and schools that can offset these disadvantages and to challenge the health care system to better meet the needs of children and youth confronting mental health issues," said Dr. Michael Boyle, principle investigator and Canada research chair in the social determinants of child health

To obtain an accurate picture of child and youth mental health in Ontario, our partner, Statistics Canada, has randomly selected families across Ontario. Letters were sent to these families at the beginning of October 2014 and, in the next couple of months, they will be contacted by Statistics Canada and invited to participate in the 2014 OCHS. For most families, participation involves a one-and-a-half to two-hour home visit with an in-depth series of questions about mental and physical health, social relationships, home life, the cyber world and more.

Agreeing to participate in the 2014 Ontario Child Health Study will make a real difference in the lives of our children and youth. Results from the 1983 study led federal and provincial governments to invest heavily in new child development initiatives such as the Ontario Early Years Centres. It's been 30 years since we examined child and youth mental health in Ontario. What should we be doing now to improve the mental health of our children and youth? It's time to look again. Please say yes if asked to participate.

For more information about this project or the School Mental Health Surveys, and our media kit, go to our website: www.ontariochildhealthstudy.ca.

Highlands festival reveals summer lineup

By Chad Ingram

It's shaping up to be a sidesplitting season at the Highlands Summer Festival.

The theatre company unveiled the 2015 festival lineup on Nov. 16 at McKeck's Tap and Grill in Haliburton and there's plenty of comedy on the menu.

Lend Me a Tenor, One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest and Nunsensations will be locally produced.

Lend Me a Tenor by Ken Ludwig is a farcical tale of mistaken identity that occurs when a temperamental tenor goes missing before his Cleveland, Ohio debut and the entrepreneur behind the show scrambles to find a replacement.

"This is a comedy I've wanted to do," artistic director Scot Denton told the room. "We're going to do it well . . . it's got some challenges in it . . . and one of them is the set."

For the performance the stage is set up to look like two, side-by-side rooms.

One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest is the sanitarium-set story first penned as a novel by Ken Kesey that follows the antics of a self-admitted patient who attempts to liberate his fellow residents.

The stage version was written by Dale Wasserman and varies from the famous film, which starred Jack Nicholson.

"This play is powerful . . . lots of great parts in it," Denton said.

Nunsensations by Dan Goggin is the sequel to Nunsense, the locally produced version of which was incredibly well-received at the 2013 festival.

"This is the show where the nuns go to Vegas," Denton said.

Two other shows will round out the five-production lineup.

Wingfield Lost and Found by Dan Needles stars Rod Beattie and is directed by Douglas Beattie and tells the tale of couple who find much more than water when they go looking for a new well.

Ralph and Lina is a romance that follows the journey of two Italian lovers amidst the backdrop of war.

Written by Michele Smith, it stars Dan Watson and Christina Serra.

"It's all done by two actors on a bare stage," Denton explained.

This year's festival will again feature the Early Stage youth program.

"One of the themes in Cuckoo's Nest is transformation, and I think we produce theatre which has the capacity to changes other people, and ourselves," Denton said.

"Each year we've attempted to raise the bar and each year, I think, we've done that," festival president Jack Brezina told attendees as he thanked them for their work. "It's very much a collaborative effort, putting on theatre."

Casting is anticipated to be firmed up in January.

The festival is seeking volunteers to help with sets.

Interact donation

Haliburton Highlands Secondary School students from left, Margaret Skinner, Dante MacArthur, Claire Karaguesian, Madeline Hopkins, Andrew Carmount, Jonas Hill and Emily Klose prepare to set out to collect non-perishable food items for the annual Halloween collection for the food bank in the Halbiem Cresent area in Haliburton. Organized by the HHSS Interact Club (a youth division of the Rotary club that works to help the community), 500 items of non-perishable food were collected for the 4Cs (Christian Community Concern Centre). Close to 2,000 food items were collected for food banks throughout Haliburton County, as a result of the collection by close to 25 HHSS students on Halloween. / Submitted by Jennifer Paton

New ways to celebrate Christmas

Living Large

Humour by Steve Galea

November, as we all know, is the month leading up to Christmas. As such, it has been given the awesome responsibility of hosting the Santa Claus parade and most of the Christmas pageantry. This allows us to focus on the truly important things in December – like last-minute shopping.

If you're like me – and God help you if you are – you have probably wondered about how the Santa Claus parade evolved to this point. The answer, I suspect, is by trial and error.

With that in mind, here are 10 things I'd like to see parade officials try to spice things up.

1. Make it a race: If you want to add excitement to any event all you need to do is have a start and finish line, a guy with a starter pistol, an announcer and a prize for win, place and show. Add to that a little off track betting and you'd certainly up attendance.
2. Make the elves the fantasy kind: Look, Santa's elves are in desperate need of a makeover. So why not give them bows, let them fling arrows at a few goblins and make them say cryptic things to the crowd like, "The days of men are numbered."
3. Santa in a house coat: I don't know about you, but I'm tired of Santa being so formal and his suit frankly should have been retired in the disco era after everyone else started wearing them. Let's allow him do the parade a little less formally so we get to know the man.
4. Allow the crowd to throw candy back: One of the main reasons I don't attend the larger Santa Claus parades is that candy cane related injury I got in fifth grade. But if I knew it was OK to defend myself against those little elves, things would be very different.
5. Snowball fight: A good snowball fight between spectators on both sides of the street while the parade is on would certainly spice things up. This would also allow Santa to see for himself who is naughty and nice.
6. Feed the horses Ex-lax: For a lot of us, the best part of the parade is seeing the expression on other people's faces when the horses poop. Why not build on that?
7. Have a float where a group of elves are tasked to assemble IKEA furniture: If nothing else this would make the rest of us feel better about our own failures in this endeavour. After all, Santa's elves are supposed to be able to make anything.
8. Clean-shaven Santa: People would be talking about it for years and it would rejuvenate the greeting card industry.
9. A little ice: I think it would be cool to see one random part of the parade route done on ice. Preferably on a slope. Again we'd be talking about it for years.
10. Stop with the ho ho ho: Sorry Santa, this phrase has been co-opted by hip hop.

Recognize young stars in your community

Every community has young stars, and while they may not quite have celebrity status, they deserve to be in the spotlight for all they have accomplished. Who are they? They are our future leaders – Ontario's youth.

These individuals are working hard to make their community a better place by volunteering for various organizations, making donations, saving lives and maintaining top grade averages. They are everywhere - in your homes, at school, on the field and at church. If you know someone who deserves a large pat on the back, nominate them today for the Ontario Junior Citizen of the Year Awards.

Our newspaper strongly supports this program here in Haliburton County, because we support the growth of our community. We look forward to providing recognition for such outstanding young people who continue to be fine examples of leaders in our community. The awards program is co-coordinated by the Ontario Community Newspapers Association (OCNA), of which we are a member, and sponsored by TD Bank Group and the Insurance Bureau of Canada.

Any Ontario resident aged six to 17 (must be at least six years but no older than 17 years by Nov. 30, 2014) is eligible to be chosen a final recipient of this award. Please help us by nominating an individual in one of five areas:

- A person involved in worthwhile community service
- A special young person contributing to their community while living with a physical or psychological limitation
- An individual who has performed an act of heroism in the past year
- Excellence in achievement, such as the arts or athletics
- Good kids who show a commitment to make life better for others and do more than is normally expected of someone their age

Up to 12 nominees will be chosen as the final recipients of the provincial Award and will be invited to a special ceremony held in the spring of 2015 in Toronto.

Nominate a deserving young person today, and we will personally present them with a certificate of recognition and showcase their contributions in this newspaper. Help us pay tribute to our leaders of today and tomorrow.

Nomination deadline for the 2014 Ontario Junior Citizen of the Year Awards is Nov. 30. Nomination forms are available at www.ocna.org/juniorcitizenor by calling OCNA at 905-639-8720 ext 221.

Protect yourself and loved ones from this year's flu.

The flu vaccine increases your protection against the flu virus and is covered by our provincial health plan.

Walk-ins welcome!

Starting the season

by Gail Stelter, Haliburton BIA

Great weekend coming up! The evening of Friday, Nov. 21 will be a very special time in Haliburton Village. We're starting this magical night at 6 p.m. at the Village Barn with the lighting of our Haliburton Village Christmas Tree and we're welcoming in the Christmas season with our Christmas carol sing-along led by Gord Kidd!

The spectacular night-time Santa Claus Parade at starts at 6:30 p.m. Everyone loves a parade! From toddlers to seniors and everyone in between, parades bring back memories and make new ones. Feel the excitement in the air and watch the delight on the faces of children. The Santa Claus Parade is funded by the Haliburton Village BIA and organized and carried out by the Haliburton and District Lions Club.

To make the parade work, the BIA needs financial support. It is one of my jobs to get out and about to ask the community to help in this way. If you are a business in Haliburton or the surrounding area, please help me to make sure our parade continues to light up the night this year and in the future! Email me for additional information or to receive and invoice: haliburtonbia@mail.com

Now, back to the festivities on Nov. 21. After the parade, please head up to the Haliburton Legion on Mountain Street for our annual Winter Warm Up. The Legion Ladies Auxiliary are preparing a spaghetti dinner at a most reasonable cost of $5 a plate. There will also be hot chocolate and cookies, a kids craft table, lots of great door prizes and a special gift for every child! Carl Dixon will be back again this year and is sure to entertain you with good cheer and great Christmas music! Come and warm up after the parade!

Shop till you drop at Rails End Gallery

By Angelica Blenich

This holiday season shopaholics don't have to be anonymous. A new event at the Rails End Gallery is hoping to attract both art lovers and shoppers who wish to support their public art gallery.

From Nov. 27 to 29, the gallery will be hosting a three-day silent auction fundraiser and shopping extravaganza.

From Thursday until Saturday guests can shop at the gallery's boutique during extended hours, enjoy music and merriment and bid on items donated by local artists.

The idea for the initiative came from the gallery's Boutique Improvement Committee, who wanted to get the word out that the Rails End is home to many local, handcrafted goods.

"It's about branding the boutique as a gateway to artists in the Highlands," said committee member Janet Trull. "We want people to know that this boutique is in town and it's a great place to do your shopping."

The boutique features a wide variety of items, from landscape paintings, handmade pillows, knitted winter wear, pottery, jewelry and more.

There is a wide range of prices and styles, with some of the work being created by high profile artists, as well as students enrolled at the Haliburton School of the Arts.

"The great thing is it doesn't matter if you're a student or a seasoned artist, the price is the same for a membership," said Trull.

Proceeds from the event will go towards the gallery, which relies on fundraisers such as the annual Arts and Crafts Festival, Trash and Treasures and more to cover operating expenses.

"I think it's important for people to realize that yes, this is part of our fundraising, when someone comes to buy something we say thank-you," said gallery director Laurie Jones.

"The boutique really does help us keep the lights on," said Trull.

Items in the shop are rotated regularly, so visitors can expect to see new stuff on an ongoing basis.

During the three-day event, visitors can enjoy a cash bar, allowing them to sip while they shop.

To date almost 20 items have been donated to the auction. Bids for the silent auction will start on Thursday after 11 a.m., with bidding closing at 2 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 29.

"The response from the artists has been great," said Jones. "People have fully embraced it … they're giving from their heart."

On Friday there will be refreshments and an open mike, welcoming anyone who wants to strum a guitar, sing a carol or play a fiddle.

"If a family wanted to come in and sing a Christmas carol that's fine," said Trull. "We're going to do some performances and have some fun with it."

Gift wrapping demonstrations will also take place, using origami and other funky techniques.

But apart from supporting the gallery in a financial way, the event is about spreading Christmas cheer and camaraderie.

"People want things that are handcrafted," said committee member Marguerite Easby. "There are people who appreciate that."

"If I get a present and I know it's from an art gallery it actually means more to me," said Jones.

"We want you to come and stay and listen to music and learn some fun wrapping," said Trull.

"And get to know us," said Jones. "Get to know your art gallery."

Hours for the event are Nov. 27, 11 a.m. until 7 p.m., Nov. 28, 11 a.m. until 10 p.m. and Nov. 29, 11 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Silent auction items can be viewed online at www.railsendgallery.com. For more info call 705-457-2330. The gallery is located at 23 York St. in Haliburton.

'Tis the season

Kicking off the Christmas season continues in the Village on Saturday, Nov. 22 with Santa Day at Rails End Gallery. Santa will be there to visit with your child from noon to 2 p.m. and there is sure to be a special treat, a Christmas craft, a surprise gift bag and a photo with Santa. I stopped in for a peek at last year's Santa Day. It made me smile and remember!

Sunday will be the day of yet another special Haliburton Village event. Nov. 23 it's Dysart et al's second annual Ugly Christmas Sweater Run/Walk. Dig out your ugly Christmas sweater and join the fun. For more information, please contact Andrea Mueller: amueller@dysartetal.ca.

And, just before I shut down my computer for this month, I do want to let you know that it's time for our third annual shop local Christmas contest: BIA WIN - Buy In And Win. Beginning on Nov. 14, every purchase you make at a BIA business entitles you to enter to win an all-inclusive vacation for two to Cayo Santa Maria, Cuba where you will stay at the Eurostars Cayo Santa Maria Resort or, if you prefer, you may choose the cash prize of $1,000. The draw for the lucky winner will be live on Moose FM on Friday, Dec. 19 at 12:15 p.m. after the noon news. Buy In And Win! Shop local! Shop where your heart is! Looking forward to welcoming the Christmas season to Haliburton Village!

Three million Ontarians registered donors

Ontario on track for a record year for organ and tissue donation and transplant.

New numbers released today at www.BeADonor.ca reveal that the organ and tissue donation registration rate in Ontario has now reached 26 per cent, compared to a 17 per cent donor registration rate just five years ago. The total number of registered donors in Ontario today is 3,029,097.

Between 2009 and 2014, Ontario organ donor registrations grew by 57 per cent (from 1.9 million to 3 million).

"This significant increase in donor registrations over a relatively short period of time is extraordinary," says Tom Mone, celebrated chief executive officer of Southern California's OneLegacy, a leading U.S. organ procurement organization. "We appreciate the extraordinary effort, systems, and ultimately, the inspiring and compelling messaging that this impressive growth requires. We congratulate Trillium Gift of Life Network on this achievement."

Registration saves lives. With evidence of their loved one's registered consent, almost all families honour this donation decision. In the absence of registered consent, only 50 per cent of families consent to organ donation.

"Ontario has a world class donation and transplant system and our registry was built to mimic the most successful registries in the world, says Ronnie Gavsie, president and CEO of Trillium Gift of Life Network. "One in four people in Ontario are now registered donors. We have a lot to be proud of."

Between 2009 and today, 1,334 deceased Ontario organ donors have contributed to 5,697 lifesaving kidney, liver, lung, heart, pancreas and small bowel transplants. Just over 7,500 tissue donors enhanced the lives of thousands of patients, including corneas to restore sight, heart valves, bone and skin.

Though 2014 is on track to be a record year for donations and transplant, there are still over 1,500 people on the waiting list for a lifesaving organ because there are not enough donors to meet the demand. Every three days, one of those people will die waiting.

"We need to build on this momentum and continue to drive registration rates even higher," says Dr. Eric Hoskins, Ontario's Minister of Health and Long Term Care. "I have no doubt Ontario is up to the challenge. Visit www.BeADonor.ca to register or check and update your registration"

Trillium Gift of Life Network has been reporting registration rate by region on www.BeADonor.ca since 2012. Six cities now report rates of over 50 per cent: Lively, Garson, Hanmer, Val Caron, Parry Sound and North Bay. With Vaughan and Woodbridge both reaching rates of 10 per cent, Concord is now the only community in Ontario with a rate under 10 per cent.

Quick Facts:

- One donor can save up to eight lives and improve the lives of up to 75 others.
- It is very simple to register consent for organ and tissue donation in Ontario: at www.BeADonor.ca, at any ServiceOntario centre or by mail, download a copy of the consent form at www.giftoflife.on.ca.
- If you registered or updated your consent online between March 23, 2013 and Sept. 19, 2014 you are still a registered donor. Due to a recent technical issue, Trillium Gift of Life Network has asked this group to please visit www.BeADonor.ca to update their registration to make sure their exclusion information is accurately recorded.
- The growth in registration in Ontario over four years has outpaced the U.S., a leading jurisdiction. According to the latest information available, between December 2009 and December 2013 Ontario's registration rate grew by 47 per cent compared to the US growth rate of 35 per cent.
- Communities with the most improved organ and tissue donor registration rates, from July 1, 2014 to Sept. 30, 2014: Hawkesbury (7%), East/Central Prescott and Russell Utd City (6%), Russell (5%), Rockland (5%), and Orangeville (5%).

To date, 865 individuals and 288 organizations have launched registration drives on www.BeADonor.ca to encourage their families, friends and colleagues to help save lives through organ and tissue donor registration.

CPR course can increase confidence

While the majority of Canadians believe that passersby have a duty to help others who show signs of not breathing or are unconscious, many fear harming someone or legal ramifications from performing CPR, according to new polling released by the Canadian Red Cross.

"Most people are concerned about doing more harm than good when it comes to administering CPR on someone in need," says Tracey Braun, First Aid program representative with the Canadian Red Cross. "Taking a course helps alleviate those concerns by ensuring those responding to first aid emergencies know what to do and how to best help someone in need."

Approximately one in 10 deaths in Canada results from a heart attack and more than 50,000 Canadians experience heart disease every year.

Knowing what to do in the critical minutes after an attack can save a life, which is why Canadians are encouraged to take a first aid course. A course also provides information about the "Good Samaritan" legislation in most provinces and territories in Canada, which protects those who voluntarily come to the assistance of others in emergency situations.

"It takes no more than six hours to learn the skills necessary to potentially save a life, yet less than half of Canadians say they are confident they can help someone suffering from a cardiac emergency, and that's just not enough," says Braun.

The latest polling shows that 51 per cent of respondents would not be confident to attempt CPR if they saw someone who is not breathing and unconscious, and only about 22 per cent have taken a first aid/CPR course in the last three years.

"Taking a course or getting certified would go a long way in boosting the confidence of many Canadians in performing CPR if they needed to, and indeed, nine in 10 who were polled confirmed this," she adds.

A Red Cross CPR course teaches how to recognize signs of breathing and circulation emergencies, how to call for help, perform CPR, and how to use a defibrillator. Applying CPR, when used with an automated external defibrillator, doubles a person's chance of surviving a heart attack. The CPR technique helps blood flow to the heart and brain, buying time until medical experts arrive.

The Canadian Red Cross is a leading provider of CPR programs and has been offering them to Canadians for over 50 years. For more information or to find a course near you, visit www.redcross.ca/findacourse.

Canadians may also download the Red Cross First Aid app, where online tutorials and lifesaving knowledge are available immediately. Visit www.redcross.ca/apps.
